Brackett: In Memoriam, MDCCCXXXVI MDCCCXI; An Appreciation Who educates a woman educates a race are the words with which Miss Brackett opens one of her books. Anna Callander Brackett was born in Boston, May 21, 1836. She was the oldest of the five children of Samuel E. and Caroline S. Brackett and was of old New England ancestry. She attended both public and private schools in Boston, Somerville, and vicinity; among others Mr. Abbott s famous Academy. Later she entered the State Normal School at South Framingham, Massachusetts, and was graduated from there in 1856 at the age of twenty. Miss Brackett always referred to this school in terms of highest appreciation and it was, undoubtedly, at this great state institution that she acquired that training of her extraordinarily brilliant mind, which made her so easily recognized as an authority on education in after years. Her first teaching was at East Brookfield, Massachusetts; later she became assistant at the High School at Cambridge, Massachusetts. She was next called to be assistant principal at her Alma Mater and remained at South Framingham in that position for two years. In 1860 she accepted the vice-principalship of the Normal School at Charleston, South Carolina, and had been there only a short time when Fort Sumter was fired upon. Miss Brackett remained calmly at her post, however, until it was not safe to stay longer; in fact, she was almost the last northerner to leave before the blockade was established. So long had she tarried that she was obliged to get north by going west. She journeyed in safety to New Orleans and up the Mississippi to...
