HEAT: ADVENTURES IN THE WORLD'S FIERY PLACES

Back Bay. 1 Paperback(s), 2013. soft. Book Condition: New. (Winner of a 2014 Nautilus Silver Award) The author of the hugely popular science book Cold here offers a heated companion volume. Bill Streever tours the blisteringly hot regions of science, history, and culture to find out what heat really means. With him, we firewalk across hot coals and sweat it out in Death Valley, experience intense fever and fire, learn about the invention of matches and the chemistry of cooking. Streever also takes us to such extreme heat events produced by thermonuclear weapons and the hottest moment of all time, the Big Bang."Streever is able to mix the pop science, personal experiences, and historic asides into a fun and informative commentary on a subject that few people think about despite its inherent life and death implications."Publishers Weekly (starred review)"Science and nature writer Streever . begins with vivid recollections of his experience in Death Valley, a desert too hot for cactus, with measured temperatures of 148 degrees and gruesome consequences for wanderers. Streever goes on to chronicle visits to other hot spots, including Santa Barbara, California, in the wake of a devastating, unmanaged fire; a volcanic slope in Hawaii; coal mines in the Netherlands; a thermonuclear processing plant in South America; and fire-walking schools. Streever intersperses his personal adventures with fascinating science, culture, and history, from the invention of matches to the atomic bombing of Hiroshima to discussions of the relative merits of coal, oil, and thermonuclear heat and environmental issues. A detailed notes section is as fascinating as the text."Booklist 365.
